Analysis

US jobs data remained solid which provide room for the Fed to keep interest rate higher for longer. Meanwhile, the Fed decided to hike its policy rate by 25 bps to 5.25 – 5.50% and maintained its hawkish guidance. Further rate hikes would be decided with more data dependent approach, but plenty market players view that the current level are appropriately restrictive. Other than development in US, China weakening growth, BoJ decision to widen yield curve control band and tightening global liquidity also provides uncertainty in the EM market.
